Bleckmann receives another five-star rating in the 2026 edition of the Emerce Top 100

Bleckmann has once again distinguished itself in the e-business sector. In the twenty-first edition of the Emerce 100, published today, Bleckmann achieved an outstanding five-star rating in the 'Fulfilment, shipping and warehousing' category. This places the company among the very best in the sector.

"Omnichannel fulfilment requires the coordination of many complex processes. As specialists in fashion and lifestyle supply chain solutions, we work with the most prestigious brands. With our Bscale solution, we have created an attractive solution for fast-growing brands, which is now available in a number of countries", says Jurrie-Jan Tap, Chief Business Development Officer at Bleckmann. "This recognition underlines what we stand for: continuous improvement and innovative solutions for our e-commerce and omnichannel customers, to which we remain committed."

Previous achievements

Bleckmann consistently achieves an impressive score in the Emerce Top 100 every year. In 2024, this stood at four and a half stars, and in 2025, the company also received five stars in the 'Fulfilment Warehousing' category. The company then introduced Bscale: an innovative logistics solution for start-ups and growing brands. The solution offers the benefits of professional fulfilment at the right scale and is transforming the way start-ups and scale-up brands manage their supply chains.

About the Emerce 100

The Emerce 100 is the annual special edition in which decision-makers from the online industry give their assessment of the performance of service providers in e-business. What once began as a list of one hundred companies has since grown into a comprehensive overview spanning dozens of categories. Performance is assessed on a seven-point scale, with a maximum of seven stars, based on research conducted by Motivaction and supplemented with relevant market data.
